

Bare Boys Bound From Butler

By a staff correspondent

With the words, "Streaking has struck at Loyola", Dean Sedivy presented himself fully equipped to handle the March 7 incident of Loyola streaking. Brandishing a walkie talkie, one club-like flashlight, one private eye camera (attachable at the waist), one jangling set of keys, and one six foot security guard in tow, the Dean zipped from floor to floor of Butler in search of nude rearends. By this time, the Dean had already collected a good number of snapshots of the nudies as they had returned from their romp over to Notre Dame. When the dust had settled, it became clear that the Dean had been lurking in the shadows of Butler awaiting the return of the nefarious raid on Doyle Hall.

It is not known what in fact caused the midnight raid on Doyle Hall. From all available evidence, it appears that the idea had its origin earlier that same night in the Rathskeller. For whatever reason though, about twenty-five nude males were seen returning from Notre Dame about midnight on March 7.

After the Dean's control measures were put into effect and the Dorm was swept of any streakers, a crowd of about two hundred gathered on the Butler patio. It was then about 1:00 A.M. Friday morning, March 8. The Dean had by this time withdrawn into the shadows and was consulting with his six RA's.

Psychologists say that a crowd with no purpose is a dangerous potential and Friday morning proved no exception to the rule. Some grumbling was heard but nothing seemed to be happening. For all intensive purposes, the Dean's timely action had, (no pun intended), nipped the evening's activity in the bud. The crowd was even beginning to disperse. It was now about 2:00 A.M.

The quiet was not to last however. Minutes later, about thirty-five nude males came charging out of Butler, streaked past the Dean, and charged up the hill to Doyle Hall. One streaker, a bit more brazen than the rest, asked the Dean if he wanted a picture. The streakers did not stop however, and continued charging up to Dame. As they reached the top of the hill and approached Doyle Hall, the

SL Commission Proposes Student Lounge; Discusses Possibilities For Carpool System

By Gerry Krebs

The main problem for discussion of the Student Life Commission was a report by Ed Illiano on the progress or lack of it in the car pool. Mr. Illiano stressed in his report that commuter response to the car pool setup has been generally negative. In fact, to this date, there have been only twenty people who have signed up for the carpool run by the Day Division.

One of the reasons given for this lack of interest by day commuters is that many students have already formed car pools on their own and have no need to register with the one in the school. Another reason stated for apathy toward the carpool was that gas in and around the Baltimore area has been easier to obtain since the new federal allocations have been announced.

Various members of the Student Life Commission have cited that the gas situation at the end of the month might become critical and panic might re-ignite interest in the carpool.

Another problem concerning the car pool has been finding enough people to staff the information center by the map during class hours, and Mr. Illiano stated that this would be taken care of and any volunteers would be greatly appreciated.

Another point expressed by Mr. Illiano is that people who have already signed up for the car pool should return to the files to see if there are any other people in their area and get in touch with them to form car pools.

The decision was made to keep the car pool open all week for the rest of the month in case the gas situation at the end of the month did bring renewed interest in the car pool setup. The hours that people will be able to sign up will be posted later in the cafeteria.

The SLC also considered a proposal by Mrs. Morris that a student lounge be established in Maryland Hall so that the students would not have to stand in the halls or stairways between classes.

It was suggested that a seating arrangement be put in the lower floor of Maryland Hall in front of the lockers. However, this was rejected by the administrators because the cost would be too great.

It was then suggested that the Faculty Lounge on the second floor of Maryland Hall be converted for general use by everyone. This was turned down because many teachers brought out the fact that this was the only private place on campus which they could go between classes.

The Administration pointed out that the renovation to be started on Jenkins Hall will include a large student lounge and felt that this location could serve the whole area around Maryland Hall and the two Jenkins buildings. The SLC agreed that this would be adequate for the area and that the expense of building a lounge in Maryland Hall would not be necessary.

Mr. John Hennessy, Chairman of the SLC brought up the problem of communication between the SLC and the student body. Mr. Hennessy felt that many of the students resented the Commission because it regulated life on campus and the students had no voice in the Commission.

Mr. Hennessey pointed out that this was not true. The meetings of the Commission are open and everyone is invited to express their opinions. He also stated that an effort would be made to send the minutes of all SLC meetings to the residents in Hammerman, Butler and the Underwood Apartments through the post office and the commuter students would pick up minutes in the cafeteria.

The dates, times and locations of all future Commission meetings will be posted around campus and all interested students are invited to attend.

Finally, the Commission announced that its subcommittee on Food and Housing will hold its first organizational meeting on Friday at 3:00 PM in room 514 of Maryland Hall. Any student interested, or with a problem, is invited to attend at this time.

New Senators Inducted; Executives Appointed

By Anne Worthington

The induction of new senators was the opening activity at the Student Senate last Thursday.

Candee Donahue, Cathy Burke and Tom Surface were sworn in by Senate President Ed Illiano. Mr. Illiano also stated that a member of the Senate, Denise King, had resigned requiring someone to take her place.

B.B. Fay then asked if the Senate was still interested in continuing the Teacher Evaluation Program. "The evaluations are half done. A lot of people have put in a lot of time working on this thing. I would hate to see it all go to waste."

Ms. Fay said that she would like to have a handbook compiled for the fall semester term. A decision was made to continue the evaluations on a voluntary basis.

The Executive Government appointees were then voted upon by the Senate: Rich Kilcullen as Treasurer, Jane Sturgeon as Board of Elections Supervisor and Student Government Secretary, Sue Allen.

Mr. Illiano discussed the by-laws for Executive appointments which, generally, would allow the S.G. President to submit to the Senate his plan for the organization of the Executive Branch.

This would allow the President to establish positions which are not provided for in the Constitution. The plan could be revised at any time upon submission of a new plan to the Senate. Mr. Illiano said "There are a lot of things we want to start moving on and we need certain people now to get those things accomplished."

Kevin Quinn then made a suggestion to the Senate that the mixer admission price would be $1 for Loyola students and $1.50 for all others. He also added that the age policy had not been adhered to in the past. Only those persons 18 years or older should be allowed in the mixers. Mr. Illiano suggested that Mr. Quinn write this down and submit it as a proposal for the next meeting.

Mr. Quinn also pointed out that the new liquor policy had possibly been abused. "There has been a lot of damage. The students act as if they don't want the liquor policy." Mr. Illiano said it was the responsibility of the Senate to watch out for those who disrupt things or abuse the policy.

Bob O'Reilly was elected President pro-tem of the Senate by a vote of 14 for, 2 abstentions and none against.

IRISH FOLK SONGS were a highlight of the evening at the St. Paddy's Party last Saturday (photo essay, pp. 4-5).

Concert Scheduled

JO JO GUNNE and NILS LOFGREN & GRIN will perform in concert in the Loyola gymnasium on April 5, from 8-12 p.m.

Advance sales will begin within a week. Tickets for Loyola students will cost $3.00.

A student government spokesman announced that Grin will perform "White Lies," and "See What Love Can Do." Jo Jo Gunne is composed of former members of the group, Spirit known for its hit song, "Run, Run, Run."

"Both groups enjoy excellent reputations in concert, and both have also appeared on NBC's "Midnight Special." Nils Lofgren has currently been on tour with Neil Young.

Repeat Grade Policy Approved by CODDS

Student QPA Rank Procedure Changed

By Scott Knox

The committee on Day Division Studies (CODDS) has taken action on a wide range of issues in the past few months. The most significant decisions were acceptance of a "Repeat Course Grade Policy" and a new student rank procedure.

Under the "Repeat Course Grade Policy", which will begin this spring or next fall, a student may elect to repeat any course in which the grade he received is not satisfactory to him. If he chooses to do so he must repeat the same (if it is a core or major requirement) or in the same area (a science core course to replace a science core course; an elective to replace an elective).

This second grade, higher or lower, would then be used in place of the first to compute the student's G.P.A. On the transcript the initial grade will still appear, but without credits or quality points; the repeat grade and credit will also appear and will be noted by placing an "R" after the grade.

Dean McGuire, Day Division Dean of Studies, noted that such a policy alternative should really be used by students doing poorly in a course, especially during freshman and sophomore years. The policy is not designed for students to "polish up" their G.P.A. by repeating B courses to try for A's, as an example.

Also, this policy would not affect graduation honors since all course grades are computed and utilized to determine final honors.

CODDS has also taken action in the area of student rank. As of this past fall semester, rank will be determined on the basis of the most recently completed semester's G.P.A. alone. The cumulative G.P.A. will not affect rank, although it will be included on the transcript.

Another decision by CODDS will lead to the formation of a "Loyola College Undergraduate G.P.A." as opposed to a Day School G.P.A. or Evening G.P.A. As of this semester, all course grades for day and evening students will be computed in the cumulative G.P.A. Students moving from one division to the other will transfer not only credits, but grades as well.

The Committee also enacted a requirement for "Comment Cards." This policy would require all faculty members who submit F as a student's semester grade to submit a card containing the reasons, in the instructor's eyes, that the student received the failure.

Streakers Duel With Dean

girls of Notre Dame gave a loud cheer and urged the streakers to circle the dorm. The streakers charged around the dorm like the gladiators of old and swung past the convent. The streakers had circled the dorm and were preparing a second charge when the Dean caught up with them.

Rather than have their bodies captured by the Dean's camera, the thirty-five streakers dashed down the hill toward the library but within cover of the woods. It was reportedly rough going for a while but everyone safely made it to the apartments before the Dean showed up.

At one point of the mad retreat from Dame, someone was sweeping the Underwood field area with a high-powered spotlight but could only catch flashes of skin in the darkness.

As it turned out, all the streakers were able to don clothes before the Dean arrived at the apartments. Slowly, the conquering heroes returned to Butler and the crowd which had previously gathered, dispersed quietly. There were, however, reported incidents of activity until about 4:00 A.M. but they were of no consequence and the Dean did not reappear that morning.

RR Fay Resigns from COUS

Teacher Evaluations Probably Doomed

Last week, BB Fay announced her resignation from the student Senate's Committee on Undergraduate Studies.

Ms. Fay explained that the reason for her resignation was due to student apathy and unconcern.

The following open letter to the college community presents a further explanation of the resignation.

Dear Members of the Loyola Community

In Oct. 1973, the committee on Undergraduate Studies of the Student Senate (C.O.U.S.) planned an extensive Student Evaluation of teaching. In Nov. 1973, students conducted the evaluation in 178 courses (approx. 225 courses were offered in the Fall term).

B B Fay

There were 19 courses that prohibited evaluation for various reasons. Eighty-seven percent of the courses were evaluated. From Dec. 10 until March 11, the evaluations were intended to be compiled. Of the 178 evaluations 23 were compiled. Of the 23 compiled, 7 are ready for publication.

The project endeavored to evaluate, from the students viewpoint, the effectiveness of each teacher in each course that teacher taught. The idea was that evaluation is fundamental to the development of an effective process. Furthermore, since the feeling was generated that students were inhibited by the present system of teacher evaluation, the C.O.U.S. felt a new process of evaluation was essential.

Unfortunately, because of 99 44/100% lack of concern by members of the elected Student Government, breakdowns in communication, lack of follow-through in commitments, and the demands of the evaluation exceeding the desires of the students to participate in the continuation and publication of the project, the project cannot continue.

In the last issue of the GREYHOUND, students were requested to help with the evaluation. From that request, one student showed interest. In the Senate meeting of Tues., March 7, the progress of the project was reviewed. The senators elected to continue the project. Unfortunately, only four senators showed genuine interest, that is, stated that they would help. To date, three evaluations were finished.

Obviously, the project cannot continue with the lack of concern showed by the students. The project publication date and distribution date was one week before spring registration.

The interest and concern the elected Student Government portrays for the academic environment of the student body is (almost) non-existent. No project endeavoring to evaluate can continue when interest or concern for the student's academic programs is invisible.

It is for the above reasons that I resign, (with pity for the students) from the committee. With my resignation, there is no more operating "C.O.U.S."

Hound of the Week

And we thought they were only kidding.

The deserving winners of this week's coveted "Hound of the Week" Award are our cheerful, friendly, courteous and helpful switchboard operators. These ladies have repeatedly threatened (jokingly, we thought) to sabotage the GREYHOUND copy before it reached the printer, unless we did a story about them for the paper.

"We're the call girls of Loyola," one of the operators informed us. "If you want to get your calls you'll take our picture. We'll sabotage the paper if you don't get a story," she added.

Well, last week, after the envelope containing the articles and pictures for the last issue of THE GREYHOUND was delivered to the switchboard to await pick-up by the Carroll County Times, it was misplaced (a shopping bag was set on top of it) and the driver was sent away empty-handed. This mistake was promptly reported at 3:00 p.m. the following afternoon. The foul-up resulted in one hundred thirty miles of extra travel (by GREYHOUND staff members), several headaches, a couple of burgeoning ulcers, and a paper that was put together between 12:30 and 7:30 Thursday morning (that's A.M., as in "wee hours").

But, we all make mistakes, right? To err is human? Forgive and forget? So, as a gesture of friendship and goodwill, the operators refused to allow the GREYHOUND copy to be picked up or delivered at the switchboard (afraid they'll "misplace" it?) Nor did they stop there; they also refused to allow THE GREYHOUND to be delivered to the Jesuit Residence on Friday mornings, as has been customary. If they're afraid they'll misplace 2500 newspapers, there's a serious problem somewhere.

Though Mr. Paul Melanson, Vice President of Finance and Development, indicated that the operators lack the authority to refuse to allow pick-up and delivery at the switchboard, he asked that we be "understanding" because of the many problems with which they must cope.

And we must admit, their reaction when their blunder caused us so much extra work was a logical one. If an operator were to connect you with a wrong number, for example, it would be unreasonable to expect them to do anything other than hang up on you in disgust.

The switchboard is the heart of Loyola. The very lifeblood of the college flows through this small station manned by Loyola's call girls; the efficient operation of the school depends on the switchboard operators.

That explains a lot of things.

Ellsberg Cancellation

Daniel Ellsberg, booked to speak at Loyola Wednesday, cancelled late the day before, citing a heavy appearance schedule and inability to make the noon program.

Mr. Ellsberg is the former Defense Department planner who leaked to the press the famous "Pentagon Papers" dealing with the Vietnam War.

After Mr. Ellsberg and his agents, the American Program Bureau, informed the school of the cancellation, it was announced by Student Government Association President Neil McMahon. Mr. McMahon added that a possible re-scheduling is being considered.

Thanks to You It's Not Working

Lack of Interest Hurts Commuter Carpool

By Linda Szczybor

In the closing weeks of February, a great many Loyola students were missing classes to stand in long lines at gas stations in hopes of obtaining a few precious gallons of fuel. Their purpose was to get enough gas to transport themselves to classes once again.

The Commuter Students Association under Mr. Hennessey's guidance, decided to investigate what could be done to help alleviate the problem. A car pool program was set up starting March 4. So far, response has been less than over-whelming. As of March 8, only 15 persons had registered.

The system is set up to work as follows: A map of the Baltimore metropolitan area has been posted on the wall in the Student Center Lounge. It has been divided into numbered sections or zones. The registrant fills out a file card with his zone address and scheduling information. The cards are filed in zone order. Persons registered may use the file system to look up others living in their area who are interested in forming a car pool. The system is fine, but it is the students' obligation to make workable arrangements.

In spite of the many warnings voiced by environmentalists and physicists that the crisis can only get worse, with dwindling supplies of fuel and higher prices for that fuel which is available, no one seems to be interested in our car pool system.

Mr. Hennessey feels that part of the lack of response may be due to students making their own arrangements with persons whom they already know in their vicinity. In addition, the system was initiated at the beginning of the month, when gas was plentiful. Students don't feel the pinch yet, and haven't responded.

Charles Pizza, CSA president, offers some encouragement to those apprehensive about the system. Individuals have walked in, looked at their position on the map zone, and felt that arrangements inside their zone wouldn't work out. Any of the cards in the system which are convenient may be used by registrants. Perhaps someone located in another zone which is along the route you travel, needs a ride. You aren't limited to one zone on the map.

Many people are using the buses once again. However, for some persons, especially those in outlying areas, car pooling may be cheaper and less time-consuming. Expenses are shared in the system. Operating your car with passengers can be more efficient than riding the bus.

The earlier one joins, the better are the chances for finding someone with a schedule compatible to yours. If you wait until the end of the month, it may be too late. The people near you may have joined with someone else.

The most important factor involved in the carpool system is the individual. He must be willing to give up some personal freedom, and enter into a spirit of cooperation. Can Loyola students shed their apathy for anything which asks for a bit too much personal sacrifice?

The Loyola student seems to be following the thinking of the general public—things will work out eventually. The big scare of last month is over for the time being. Let's not worry about it. But, Maryland officials have been predicting a bleaker gas situation in March, which has three more days than February.

This Is It

THIS IS the new GREYHOUND mailbox, located in the Cafeteria near the "food" line. It's marked "Letters to the Editor, Suggestions, Comments, Classified Ads" because that's what it's for. Get the idea?

Academic vice president Stephen McNierney announced Monday the appointment of a new acting registrar.

Mrs. Elizabeth A. ("Libby") Doyle became acting registrar effective the date of the announcement. She succeeds Victor Pinard, who has been named to head a new Office of College Information.

Mrs. Doyle, whose new office will be located in Maryland Hall room 207, comes to the Registrar's Office after two years as administrative assistant to Dean Francis McGuire of the Day Division. Prior to that appointment, Mrs. Doyle was secretary in the Day Division office.

As acting registrar, Mrs. Doyle will be responsible for the furnishing of class lists and grade reports, maintenance of permanent record cards, and deficiency notification for the College's day, evening, and graduate divisions.

A graduate of Immaculata College in Pennsylvania, Mrs. Doyle will be receiving her master's degree from Loyola this May. Prior to joining Loyola in 1967, she was associated with St. Joseph's College in Philadelphia for two years.

CAREER PLANNING AND PLACEMENT will move from Jenkins Hall to STUDENT CENTER, ROOMS 12, 14 and 18 during the week of March 18, 1974

Some Thank You's... And a Small Appeal

There have been a lot of comments recently about the Greyhound, specifically that we have been too harsh to certain parties on campus. Well, at least the Greyhound is being read and is sparking a mild form of controversy-no matter how bad it may be.

This week we want to commend some people on campus that deserve recognition. First honors go to Kevin Quinn who organized last weekend's St. Paddy's party. It was probably one of the best organized and most successful events ever scheduled on campus. Everyone was well behaved and orderly. As this is something that rarely happens to Loyola parties, we think Kevin did a great job.

We would also like to recognize Father Eugene Ahern who has been very brave throughout his illness. We feel he is one of the most socially aware and concerned individuals on campus. A man such as this can only serve as an inspiration to the college community.

Faculty support is one of the most vital things the Greyhound has. Every day we receive material and notes from them and it is difficult to express how important that is to us. It shows that someone cares. More important-it shows someone reads it!

To those who criticize the paper-we are only trying to improve and it is impossible to please everyone. We only ask that you help us out by telling us what you like or don't like. How else do you expect us to change?

We have put a mailbox in the most frequented area of campus-the cafeteria. So everyone use it and we can give you an even better paper. The criticism we have heard lately from secondary sources can only be positive if everyone who has a complaint approaches us directly about it.

We are only trying to get better.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

As a student who has been involved in this campus in the past three years which includes a term as President of my class, I am not at all shocked with the unethical firing of the Varsity Basketball Coach. It has supported my convictions that the Man does not care about the everyday affairs of Loyola or his students. The Very Rev. Joseph S. Sellinger owes us an explanation. You are not Richard M. Nixon.

I am not condoning the slanderous attack on Kevin Kavanaugh nor do I believe Nap to be the Man he has been painted by us all these last 2 weeks but the community deserves an explanation.

Even though the educational system in America is an autocratic institution, I, as a student, in a private college, paying $1700.00 dollars a year, out of common courtesy should have been told in a general assembly about the release of Nap Doherty. This institution prides and sells itself on its personal relationship with the student. The Middle Atlantic States evaluation of Loyola College in 1967 states that the President must be a personable man. Well Father, you finally showed your true colors; thanks for nothing. Why is it the only time I get a letter from you it is to inform me of a tuition raise?

THE GREYHOUND editorial refers to the firing of the Coach as a personality clash. Father Sellinger states in The Evening Sun's Sport section that it was a "communication problem. The school has changed. We are co-educational now, and Nap did not adapt well to that. He wanted it to be the same Loyola he had grown up with in the Fifties."

Also, an informed source justifying Nap's firing claims he has not recruited anyone in nine years. With a $3,000.00 dollar budget a year Nap had to be a wiz to recruit such athletes as Krawczyk, Gwiazdowski, Robinson, Floyd, Cannon, Rohde, Morris and Jim Smith.

Father Sellinger states that if all he wanted was a Basketball Coach, Nap would never have been fired. Loyola College does not have a phys. Ed. major but it does have too many administrators, so what are the other six jobs Nap is supposed to be doing? If your Varsity Basketball Coach, who also coached track and field last year and the golf team is supposed to be doing six other jobs what the hell is Kevin Kavanaugh's job, P.R.!

I submit to the Student Body that Father Sellinger's major reason in firing Nap Doherty was partly a personality clash. I submit that Father Sellinger should justify this action first to Nap Doherty and second to the Loyola College community, which believe it or not include us students.

I hope Father Sellinger would take my advice, address the student body now and prove my facts incorrect.

To the Editor,

I just recently read the first three issues of the second semester Greyhound and would like to share a few reactions with you. I strongly objected to the pre-election statement of Mr. McMahon and Mr. Illiano. First, because of their use of the word "rape" to describe Loyola's academic scene. "Hape" is a violent word; it involves serious trauma and intense human suffering. To say that thirty administrators run the school and that the wrong procedure is used to appoint students to committees and then to call this "rape" is a totally irresponsible use of words. (Steve Fields did an excellent job in his criticism of their statement). Secondly, I fear that their use of this word could possibly hinder dialogue with the College administration. When an administrator is approached by the new SGA President and Vice President, how can the administrator forget that he has at least implicitly been called a "rapist?" It is rather difficult to dialogue on a mutually serious level when one of the parties to the dialogue has been so named. I sincerely hope, however, that despite this inauspicious beginning true dialogue on the problems of Loyola will continue between the College administrators and the new officers of the SGA.

Mr. O'Hare's column in the February 22nd issue on hetero and homo-sexuality was almost beyond belief. Year after year the parietal hours have been extended. That college men and women must leave each other's residence halls rooms at 3 A.M. on the weekend and at midnight on days preceding class is, I think, a reasonable policy. This policy, together with the many other opportunities of meeting members of the opposite sex, gives ample time for meaningful relationships. To say that Loyola has embarked on a campaign to stamp out heterosexuality and to call the residence halls "homosexual" is again a totally irresponsible use of language.

Of much more serious consideration is Mr. Hickey's commentary on the column. Anyone who has counseled or who has been personally acquainted with men and women who are homosexuals or who have homosexual tendencies knows that there are many different kinds of homosexuals. It is not a synonym for "child molester". Some homosexual men could very well be leaders of a Boy Scout troop, for example, while others could not. It is one thing to treat the homosexual with sympathy and un-

Why is it that the people in the United States are usually such spoiled brats? Not the politicians so much, but those who are commonly referred to as "The Silent Majority", which, incidentally, is never silent. It likes to complain. It's popular to put everything and everybody down.

People seem to think that because they're given a choice about something their responsibility ends when they make that choice. For example, when we elect our officials, we presume that from the moment they assume duty until the day they die, they are supposed to do everything we want immediately. Of course, these elected officials do have a responsibility to their constituents, but does that entitle the people to criticize them for everything they do-or don't do? It wouldn't be so bad if the criticism was constructive, but it isn't. It's idle, disquieting garbage that does nothing but sow the seeds of discontent.

Understanding and to support his demand for his legal rights, but I have serious reservations about gay liberation organizations. I have often gotten the impression, wrongly perhaps, that these organizations have as one of their purposes to make it easier and safer for homosexuals to form liaisons. Without getting into casuistry or quantitative morality, I believe that some liaisons and some physical acts of love between members of the same sex are not morally justifiable. As Mr. Hickey says, "sexual preference should be extremely personal". There are however degrees of preference and some personal preferences are wrong.

I have two other reactions to the first three issues but since this letter is already too lengthy I will save them for another time.

Sincerely,
(Rev.) Eugene Ahern, S.J.

Do the Actions of Loyola Faculty Refute Economic Theory?

Sitting through Loyola's basketball games is a thoroughly enjoyable experience for me--not only because of the action on the court but also because the price of admission (zero) suits my budget. Unfortunately, it seems that many of my faculty-mates do not share this feeling--for faculty attendance at these events lags noticeably. Economic theory predicts that commodities with a price-tag of zero will encourage "over consumption" or will be consumed until the marginal utility derived from the marginal unit is zero. I won't pretend that the actual opportunity cost the Loyola's basketball games is zero to faculty members (after all, this would assume that faculty live in the gymnasium and have nothing better to do than to watch basketball games), but I do wonder, "Is the marginal utility of watching a Loyola basketball game that low to faculty,

Desultory Democracy

By Anne Gelderman

We in America seem to have lost our sense of true loyalty. None of us would want to live in the Communist countries; in fact, most of us would never think of leaving the U.S.A., but so many of us put it down. Why?

I think it's because we have it so easy, and when some minor problem occurs, we get all up in arms about it. Because all we have are piddly things to upset us.

I'm not saying that America doesn't have its real problems, because it does. There is still poverty in America. There is still prejudice. There is still corruption, and it doesn't stop with our government. But even with these real problems, most of us have nothing to contribute but idle talk. And complaints, because while we're not willing to do anything ourselves, we expect others to, and do it perfectly. I don't know about you, but I don't think that's really fair.

or do the actions of Loyola faculty require a peculiar theory of consumer behavior?" - W. M. Penn, Jr.

To The Editor:

This letter is in regard to the article that appeared in last week's GREYHOUND concerning the Hammerman Hall Council. In that article, your reporter stated that the council was the "brainchild of Anne Gelderman." Unfortunately, that's not true. I'd love to take the credit because I think it's a fine idea, however, we must give credit where credit is due.

Actually, the idea was first made known to the Hammerman Head Resident, Kathleen Casey, at a housing convention at Frostburg State. Casey then brought the idea back to us, and the entire Hammerman staff, which consists of Elayne Zanas, Casey, and myself, then developed a structure which we hope will be workable for the Hammerman residents.

Except for the original structure, the Hall Council structure, the Hall Council belongs to all the residents of Hammerman, and it's working beautifully. As an R.A., I would like to extend my thanks, and as a resident I would like to express my pride in the great job everyone is doing.

Yours truly,
Anne Gelderman

Student Government 'Antiquated'

SGA 'Tired of Talk'—Illiano

By Anne Worthington

"The way Student Government is set up now is very antiquated," Ed Illiano, newly elected SG Vice-President talked about his political philosophy.

"We really want to do things this year and our administration is going to work. The key is information. We are going to do everything to let the students know what is going on."

"Student government should not just be concerned with running a government. We have the finances, if we get some ideas. All we need is people who will write down ideas, give them to us so we can work on them. We are tired of talk—we want to do something."

When questioned about the prevalent apathy on campus, Mr. Illiano said, "The students are not apathetic, they are submissive. I really believe the dissatisfaction is there, the problem is that no one knows where to go. When people are not aware, and do not know how to alliviate this, they become submissive. And that is what has happened."

According to Mr. Illiano, the thing that has caused the submissive attitude is poor rapport with the Administration of the school. "How many administrators run the school? Who are they? What do they do? We pay the bills, they run the school. Shouldn't we know who they are? Must the business end of a college be so alienated from the academic?"

"People don't know who to go to. They get the run around. The Administration has a beautiful red-tape system here. That is why it works so well - they have the people right where they want the. A great check and balance system."

Knowing the authorities of the school could according to Mr. Illiano, help some of the personal dissatisfaction that student feel. "How many people have seen Fr. Sellinger? People ask me who he is. They don't know. They don't know where to go to find out. People question but they don't get any answers. And the red tape system keeps on working."

"I wouldn't hesitate to hire a lawyer to investigate some of the things these people do. How else can you break away and make a change?"

Being on a small campus hasn't helped that much, according to Mr. Illiano. Most students have developed a "come and go" attitude about college. "Students think of school as a four year cycle. You are never really aware of yourself as an individual. The future is really important. The school should provide to the best of its ability every possible asset such as placement or counseling. Student government should do something about this."

"They talked about Loyola II. Where is it? It is a farce. It was supposed to be a whole new awareness. Awareness as a student as a being instead of a number. I came here to be on a small campus so I could have just that. But what student doesn't feel as if he just comes and goes?"

Mr. Illiano says that students come to college for one of two reasons, to be educated for self or educated for financial success in the business world.

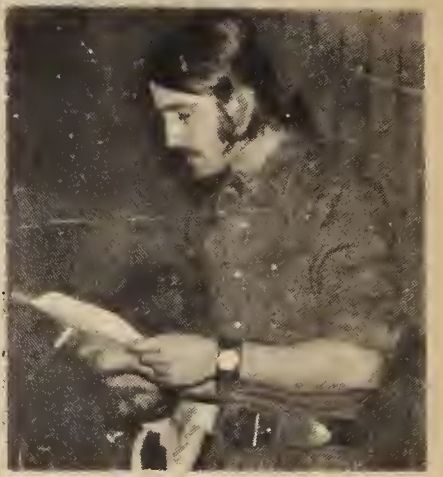

Regardless of the reason, the school, he says, should be prepared to assist both types, it should be flexible in the orientation of the students.

"We could rip down the structure and make it work. So could the Adminsitration if they realized what types of students they deal with. It could be established as a prominent awareness."

The present Student government is working on a Student Information Center. "This is the only school, that I know of, that doesn't have one. This building is established as a Student Center, and that is what it should be." Mr. Illiano went on to suggest that a work-study student could have the job of running the Information Center.

The Senate could be a key in getting things done around campus according to Mr. Illiano. "We really believe that the Senate can get things moving. It is good for student input. Anyone can come. I wish more people would so we can bring in some new ideas of plans."

Mr. Illiano says his government has a lot of activities planned. "We are working on a concert now. People don't get what they want because there isn't enough money. We can only do so much with what we have. Why the money wasn't spent this year, I don't know. We will spend it to get the things the students want."

"Academics have the first priority, but people should take it for granted that social activities will be provided. We will work to do that. But, financially people have to know what is going on."

Mr. Illiano feels that a position in SG. means being a part-time student and full-time student government. "We want student support. If you voted for us, then you were voting for what we believe in that is, a government that believes in total representation not just a one man operation."

"I really think the faculty is all for us. We feel faculty support is just as important as student support. They face the same hassles and red-tape system that we do. They know our problems. And I think they are with us."

Mr. Illiano feels that past SG's have been too much talk and not enough work. "You can use semantics and diplomacy only so far. But they don't work. You have to push, you have to aim for something. Neil and I are fed up. And we are going to do something about it. Our administration is going to work."

"I am very idealistic. Things can be done, and the time to do them is now. I feel like working-it is not a show. A lot of people feel we can do smething. These are the people who support us. We are not going to let them down."

Nostalgia Films Must Have Been Nominated Out of Desperation

By D. Timothy Burall

Considering the two big nostalgia films, American Graffiti and The Way We Were, we'd do better listening to the advice of Save the Tiger and keep away from the past. American Graffiti is up for five Oscars, including best picture and best supporting actress (Candy Clark), and The Way We Were is up for six, including best actress (Barbara Streisand); all except possibly the latter are either a miracle or were chosen out of desperation for nominees.

It is said that sentiment is akin to the pornography; in which case the closest film to The Way We Were is Deep Throat. (Let the Supreme Court work on that one.)

The film concerns the ill-fated (there's a good sentimental term) romance between Streisand and Robert Redford. They first meet in college during the 1930's; she is a political activist decrying Hitler and praising Stalin while the rest of the student population couldn't care less, and Redford is the popular super-jock. Streisand has a problem in that she hates him because he won't get involved, yet she loves him because he is so pretty.

Meeting again about ten years later, they get married. They still have the same problem; that he only wants to have fun. He writes a novel which is a flop at first, but then is miraculously bought by a movie company. The early '50's finds them in Hollywood when he is a script writer. Meanwhile, all Hollywood is upset about McCarthy's witch-hunts that are beginning to hit close to home. Streisand immediately gets involved and winds up spending a night in jail after she "doth protest too much." Their marriage ends soon after that when she finds out that he has been (you guessed it) fooling around.

It's not even a good doorstop.

A few years later they meet. Streisand is on a street corner passing out "Ban the Bomb" literature. There is a tearful hello and goodbye and each go off into the sunset in their own separate ways.

The film is a total waste of talent. Both Streisand and Redford can act very well, but there is no need for talent in the film. What there is, Streisand make good use of, making her character almost credible, whereas Redford is able to make it through the film without changing expression.

Compared with American Graffiti, however, The Way We Were is a deep philosophical movie. American Graffiti is so ridiculous that even the Mad magazine satire is no more absurd.

The film is about one night in the lives of four boys: one spends the evening trying (unsuccessfully) to seduce his girl-friend; another, a stereotyped egg-head who spends the evening trying to impress an empty-head MM typed; another, who is the top banana in town is stuck with a twelve year old who threatens to yell "rape;" and finally the fourth spends the night trying to track down a mysterious girl in a white Lincoln.

The best performance in the movie was not given by Candy Clark, who plays the empty-headed blonde, but rather by good old Wolfman Jack. In desperation Curt (one of the aforementioned boys) goes to Wolfman to get him to help him find his girl in the white Lincoln. Wolfman gives a short essay on the life of a sad but popular DJ.

Another good thing (they are hard to find) is the title. The film is about American life and it is about as interesting as a subway wall.

These two films show just how credible and culturally stimulating nostalgia is. Nostalgia is the ultimate in escapism. It offers neither explanations for its phenomenon or useful philosophy for the present. Escapism has its place, however, even if it is like American Graffiti and is as artistic as scribbling on a wall.

A Look in Brief

Special Programs on Campus

Winnie Hendler, whose sculpture is represented in prominent collections in the United States and abroad, will be featured at the fifth in a series of "Evenings of the Arts" at Loyola College, Monday, March 11.

The program gets underway at 7:30 p.m. in the undercroft of Loyola's Alumni Memorial Chapel, Charles Street and Cold Spring Lane.

Winni, as she is generally known to the public, has sculpted in bronze, ceramic, wood, epoxy and cement; however, for the past few years, she has been concentrating on acrylic sculpture.

Her drawings, paintings and sculpture have been exhibited in juried shows in museums in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Washington. She has been invited to exhibit in over 50 shows and has had over two dozen one-woman exhibitions. Her works are included in collections in Mexico, Austria, Greece, Italy, Argentina and Israel as well as in the permanent collection of the Edward Gallagher, III Memorial at the University of Arizona.

Winni has designed and copyrighted six chess sets in addition to winning a national prize for her work and many other awards and honors.

A member of Artists Equity, the National League of Pen Women, and the American and Maryland Craft Councils, she attended art schools in New York, New Jersey and Maryland and also taught privately and for the Creative Arts Workshop.

Her acrylic compositions, which have evolved from a traditional background and mode of expression, combine air-space forms and their interplay. Elane Stein, director of Radio WCBM's Metromedia Art Gallery, says of her work: "Unquestionably, Winni is ahead of our times, totally dedicated to her art and certain to be recognized universally for all of this by skeptics, critics, and the general public."

During the Loyola presentation, Winni will exhibit numerous slides of her work as well as actual pieces of sculpture.

The "Evenings of the Arts" series at Loyola is open to the public, free of charge. Light refreshments and informal opportunities to meet featured guests are included in each program.

For more information, contact Loyola Special Events, 323-1010, extension 289.

The Theology and Philosophy Departments at Loyola College will present a lecture by Robert C. Neville, author of God The Creator, on March 15 at 8 p.m.

The public is invited to attend the program which is being offered in honor of the 700th anniversary of the death of Thomas Aquinas. Dr. Neville's remarks will be on "A General Notion of Truth."

An Elder in the Methodist Church since 1965, Dr. Neville is presiding officer and coordinator of Philosophy at the State University of New York at Purchase (SUNY). He has also taught at Fordham University, Yale, and at Wesleyan University.

He was awarded his bachelor's degree, magna cum laude, his master's, and Ph.D. from Yale.

Dr. Neville has published extensively in Theological Studies, Review of Metaphysics, and other periodicals. Another book, Cosmology of Freedom, will be published shortly by Yale University Press.

The Loyola program will be held in the undercroft of the Alumni Memorial Chapel, Charles Street and Cold Spring Lane. There will be no admission charge.

For further information, interested persons may contact 323-1010.

Maxine Greene, philosopher, educator, and author, will be guest speaker at a program sponsored by the Loyola College Education Department on Saturday morning, March 23.

In a lecture open to the public, Professor Greene will discuss "PBTE: Efficiency and Autonomy." The talk will concern performance based teacher education as well as faculty development, responsibilities of teachers, and aims of teacher education.

A professor of philosophy and education at the Teachers College, Columbia University, Ms. Greene has served in the John Dewey Society, the American Educational Research Association, and the American Educational Studies Association. She was selected "Educator of the Year" by Columbia and has numerous publications to her credit.

The program will get underway at 9:30 a.m. in the Ruzicka Auditorium in Maryland Hall on the Loyola campus, Charles Street and Cold Spring Lane.

High school students are invited to take advantage of the Loyola College "Instant Accept Day" scheduled for Wednesday, March 20, on the Loyola campus.

On "Instant Accept Day," students are encouraged to visit Loyola, bringing high school transcript, S.A.T. scores, $15. application fee and a completed admission application form with them. Loyola admissions personnel will be on hand to conduct brief interviews, discuss the College, and then make a decision on admission on each individual student during the visit.

Students may obtain further information or admission applications from the Admissions Office, Loyola College, 4501 N. Charles Street, Baltimore, Maryland, 21210, 323-1010.

A series of Monday afternoon, non-credit lectures are on tap in Loyola College's first "Real Estate Lecture Series" starting April 1 and running through June 24 on the Evergreen campus.

Guests at the Loyola program include James P. Ryan, president of The Ryland Group, Gordon L. Greenspun, director of acquisitions for Monumental Properties, and Richard W. Phoebus, president, Security Savings and Loan.

Coordinated by Manuel H. Lazerov, a land developer and member of the Loyola Evening Division's Business Administration Department, the series has an enrollment limit of 100 persons. Tuition will be charged either for the entire series of 13 lectures or on an individual basis for each lecture.

To register for the series, interested persons should contact: Edward J. Riehl, Evening Division, Loyola College, 4501 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Maryland, 21210, or phone 323-1010, extension 255-6.

Is the Issue Dead?

This may seem like "beating a dead horse," but the tribute paid to our ex-basketball coach Nap Doherty at the St. Paddy's Day Thirst Party is noteworthy.

It also seems that it is of particular note that there were no administrators on hand to view the enthusiastic demonstration for Doherty. But then again, does the administration really care about how the students feel about Nap? Come to think of it, does it seem to care how the students feel about anything?

When Nap showed up shortly after eleven o'clock on Saturday night, (he was late because he had watched the end of the Maryland-N.C. State game on television), master of ceremonies Kevin Quinn introduced him along with his wife, Carol. The entire assemblage rose to its feet and applauded the man who had given 17 years of his life to Loyola. The ovation lasted for ten minutes before Nap finally spoke. He thanked the students for their ovation and their support, and said that "I'll always be a Loyolaman just like I'll always be an Irishman." That statement drew the loudest cheer of the evening.

He spent the rest of the night talking to well-wishers and dancing with his wife to the tune of the Blackthorn Stick Caeli Band.

Nap said that he was "really touched" by the ovation. "I didn't expect it. Kevin (Quinn) really did a great job organizing the whole event and I was just glad that we were invited."

He declined to comment on any prospective coaching jobs. "I'm not sure I even want one. It will be kind of hard to coach anywhere but here."

At the same time, Nap hoped that the students weren't being too rough on Kevin Kavanagh. "He was put in a bad spot, and it's a shame it had to turn out this way." However, Kevin was not bothered much this past week as he was "away on a scouting trip," according to the Athletic Department.

In the meantime, speculation grows as to where Nap will go and from where his successor will come. It is rumored that a very successful local high school coach is among those being considered for the post.

So, as the controversy subsides and tempers cool, one has to wonder why - why Nap was fired, why so many people were enraged, and why they reacted at all. No matter how many people became enraged, students, faculty, or alumni, there are only a few opinions that really count.

SHORTS OF ALL SORTS: The lacrosse team opens a 14-game schedule tomorrow afternoon at home against Villanova. Coach Rick Buck's laxmen play their first games at home against Villanova, William and Mary, Morgan State, and Roanoke.

The baseball team begins its season a week from tomorrow at Salisbury State with a doubleheader. Coach Kavanagh's diamondmen don't play their first home game until the 30th, against Mount St. Mary's.

Norfolk State won the NCAA South Atlantic Regional in a stunning upset. In successive nights, Norfolk beat defending champion Roanoke and host team Old Dominion. The College Division finals are this weekend.

Lacrosse player Kevin Lynott hopes to be back by March 26 if his shoulder separation has healed sufficiently. Kevin Robinson's shoulder injury is more severe and has sidelined him for the remainder of the season.

Baseball player Jim McGuire is hopeful of returning to active duty by mid-April. The sophomore catcher recently suffered a severely sprained ankle.

Streakers Boast New Recruits

competing in almost the bare necessities."

"Recruiting is going well. We've got a High School All-American from Running Bare, North Dakota who signed a letter of intent just last week. It is tough competing with the bigger schools. Marquette offered him his own towel, and besides, they get an N.I.T. (Naked Individual Tournament) bid every year."

Crook went on to deny rumors that he was retiring from active competition to devote his time to coaching. He said, "These guys are so good, they don't need coaching. They're all natural stars."

The team will lose only two players to graduation, namely Big Willie Comer, and playmaker and field general Bobby Steiner. Crook stressed that "They were both really great, extremely coachable, and I'm hoping that Loyola retires their numbers."

Headaches are soon anticipated as the Women's Athletic Department is rumored to be organizing a streaking team. Crook confessed, "I just hope they don't cut into our practice time. We're beginning those tough two-a-day drills. I want this team in top shape by tournament time. I've instituted a no drinking and no smoking policy, and if it's ignored as I anticipate, we could go undefeated."

Crook went on to stress that streaking is the safest varsity sport on campus, not one sprained ankle-yet.

Lacrosse Team Hosts Villanova Tomorrow

By Mark Kreiner

Despite cold, damp weather, muddy field conditions and a 10:30 a.m. start, the Loyola lacrosse team sparked in a 9-7 scrimmage win over Fairleigh-Dickinson of Madison, N.J.

Both teams matched each other goal for goal in three out of four quarters but Loyola commandeered a 3-1 edge in the decisive third quarter to provide for a 9-7 margin.

It looked like one of the Hound teams of old in the opening minutes of the game as F.D.U. was handed two goals in the first four minutes. Loyola quickly adjusted and reversed its play, with Don Rutkowski's goal at 10:18 putting the Hounds on the scoreboard. Attackman John Kellerman knotted the game at 2-2 with five seconds left in the first quarter.

Again, F.D.U. jumped out in front on a shot by Attackman Stotzler with 1:21 gone in the period. At 3:20, the score was tied as sophomore Tom Crompton came around the left side of the crease and scored as he was knocked to the ground. Two minutes later, Kellerman netted his second goal on some pretty passing in front. Freshman attackman Ray Schaab passed across the field to Crompton who spotted an open Kellerman at the doorstep for the easy score.

With seven minutes to go in the half, F.D.U.'s attackman Reiss rifled a shot past a startled James Slafkosky to tie the score at 4-4 at the half.

Both teams came out hitting the second half. The game took on a very physical aspect as tempers started to flare. Crompton put Loyola ahead at 6:16 on a beautiful face dodge on the left side of the crease. Two minutes later middle Jeff Mueller grabbed a ground ball in front of the F.D.U. net and winged by the visitors' diving goalie. F.D.U. middle Hill scored his second goal of the game at 9:08 to narrow the Loyola lead to 6-5. Senior attackman Rutkowski fired a sizzling shot past the goalie as time expired at the end of the third period. Loyola held a 7-5 margin at that point.

Again, F.D.U. scored a quick one at 1:53 of the final stanza before Stotzler scored his third goal to tie the game at 7-7 with 4:20 gone in the fourth period.

With each team bearing down, playing physical defense, the shots were few and the penalties many with most of the action in the midfield.

Crompton put Loyola ahead for good at 12:51 on a beautiful feed from captain Paul Awalt. Minutes earlier, Awalt had wasted a golden scoring opportunity when he missed a shot from the right side. The goal didn't demoralize F.D.U. at all and it took some clutch saves by Slaffy down the stretch to preserve the Hound victory.

"Rut" joined Crompton in scoring the hat trick by scoring his third with 1:42 remaining put away the verdict at 9-7.

Although the team gave up early goals in each quarter, they showed hustle and fine defensive work. The passing at times was brilliant. The defensive corps of "Hondo" Maas, Ed Anderson, and "Chip" Gregory played an all-around good game as did the rest of the team, especially middle John Boyle, and seniors

Counter-Analysis:

Kevin Kavanagh

Analysis? I can't help marvel at the liberty with which this word is used in the Greyhound. I am specifically referring to the article in the Friday, March 8, 1974 issue by Pat Harlow and Roy Gagne titled, "Kavanagh, Athletic Director." Let's counter analyze the major points of the article.

First the "high-spirited antics" of Mr. Lodato bring up a subject which has always interested me. At what point does spectator reaction become unsportsmanlike or how much "profanity" and abuse by fans should be tolerated? Certainly no one would say, "an unlimited amount," but someone must decide; and I can think of no one better qualified to set the policy than the Director of Athletics. Perhaps, Mr. Lodato would prefer to let the referee decide the policy which might increase the amount of forfeited games. Perhaps, Mr. Lodato's remarks did influence the referee's decisions in which direction is anybody's guess. Why was it necessary for Mr. Kavanagh to request that Mr. Lodato apologize to the referee? Ask Mario. Ask yourself this, why should a person whose fortunes largely depend on the interest and enthusiasm generated by Loyola's sports programs, "try to put the clamps on some good old campus "rah-rah"?"

A second item mentioned in above-referenced article, concerned a baseball player who suffered a badly sprained ankle. According to "Analysis," Mr. Kavanagh refused to pay for any hospital expenses connected with the injury. What "Analysis" didn't report was that the injury did not occur during baseball practice and therefore was not covered under the insurance policy carried by the college.

The final "miscue" mentioned concerned three members of the J.V. basketball team who were "forced" to practice varsity baseball in the afternoon before basketball. To blame Coach Kavanagh for "preventing" one of the individuals involved from participating in the final J.V. basketball game is like blaming Coach Doherty for "preventing" Mr. Rohde from participating in the M-D tournament. As I recall, baseball and basketball require the development of different skills. When season sports overlap closely as with basketball and baseball, it is not unusual to expect individuals who are playing on the basketball and baseball teams to practice with each team. Should we expect less of the three J.V. roundballers or of Coach Kavanagh? Not if we desire good teams!

Editorializing has its place, but to masquerade the Greyhound's "Analysis" as analysis stretches the connotation of the word a bit and certainly is not fair to the subject being "Analyzed."

Loyola Streakers Rout Notre Dame

By Seymour Skinner

Put away your basketballs, softball bats, and football shoes, for there is a new sport on campus, namely streaking. On March 7, the Loyola College Men's Varsity Streaking Team had its first meet of the season, a victorious non-league encounter against Notre Dame.

Seeking to make his team a national power, Loyola's player-coach Gary Crook assembled 30 hopefuls for the first meet. Crook points out that N.C.A.A. rules allow only 20 streakers on the varsity. Tryouts are being held as a result. After the twenty varsity members are chosen, the rest will either be placed on waivers, assigned to the taxi squad, or traded to another college. "Hopefully," says Crook, "there will be enough interest so that we can have a junior varsity team. I'm really glad the N.C.A.A. allows us to use freshman because we've got some real All-American candidates at this school."

The team will participate in Mason-Dixon paly this season, hopeful of bringing home the championship at the league tournament to be held at Roanoke's Embassy Motel in October. Crook is admittedly concerned about the tournament. He commented, "Overnight trips are tough on the guys, especially since we have trouble finding a motel that will have us two nights in a row." Should the team emerge victorious at Roanoke, it's on to the N.C.A.A. Tourney in Greensboro, N.C.

As for the season, Crook sadly admits that he couldn't schedule any afternoon matches due to Women's Lacrosse Practice, but promises a full slate of night meets, with two-night double-headers a distance possibility. Crook pointed out, "Our field has very poor lighting which gives us an advantage at home."

A real promoter, Crook has already planned some special days, including Ladies Day, Bat Day, and Players' Picture Day. Team photographer Bob Sedivy is already taking orders for team pictures taken at the team's first meet.

"We could have trouble with our budget this season," revealed Crook, "but Athletic Director Kavanagh has promised us new uniforms next year. This season, our uniforms are so bad, we're
